

Residential Organizing

Contributed by Anita Dobin

You may think you need a bigger house when what you really need is LESS stuff. Every home has potential even limited spaces can be effectively utilized. It doesn't happen overnight but with our expert guidance organizational success is achievable.

What's Cooking in the Kitchen?

The Junk drawer, the pantry, the fridge, under the sink - these can all be organizational roadblocks but they don't need to be. If your kitchen has become less efficient over time, there are things you can do to make it functional again. Together we can uncover the secrets that take your kitchen from disaster to divine.

Home office in the unemployment line?

Whether the home office is used for bill paying or as a dedicated home-based business, it needs to work as efficiently as you do. If you are not spending more time cleaning up and searching for missing files then it's just NOT WORKING.

A pleasant well-designed work environment adds to the efficiency and comfort level of the space. Creating smart filing and storage systems enables you to work smarter not harder.

Coping with the closet monster.

O.K. so you've got twelve pairs of jeans in as many size - who doesn't? Even if you can't afford a pricey closet system, we have a slew of tricks up our sleeves to help you clear out the clutter and rework your closet into a well-designed, hold-it-all area.

Kid's rooms are child's play

Our philosophy is simple. Kid's needs are not so different from adults, their space should not only be fun, it should also be functional and easy to clean up. We get them involved so you don't have to. Happily ever after - you bet.
